I read it: ☆ to myself ☆ to a grown-up ☆ to a friend

1 Every Saturday, Zain helped his uncle at the bakery on Elm Street. Uncle Tariq's bread was famous. People lined up before sunrise for his golden loaves, and Zain was sure there was a secret ingredient hidden somewhere in the kitchen.

2 This Saturday, Uncle Tariq let Zain make a batch by himself. Zain measured the flour, salt, yeast and water exactly as the recipe said. He kneaded the dough for two minutes, put it in a bowl and waited. After ten minutes, he peeked. The dough hadn't changed. He shoved it into the oven anyway.

3 The loaves came out flat and as heavy as bricks. Zain's face fell. "I used the same recipe," he said. "What's the secret?" Uncle Tariq smiled and handed him an apron. "Watch."

4 Uncle Tariq kneaded his dough for ten full minutes, folding and pressing until it was smooth and springy. Then he covered the bowl with a towel and left it alone for an hour while it slowly doubled in size. "The secret ingredient," he said, sliding perfect loaves onto the rack, "is time. Good bread can't be rushed, and neither can most good things." The next Saturday, Zain set a timer and waited. His bread was the first to sell out.
